STANLEY'S STATEMENT

Explains His Evansville
Interview Recently Published.

ANSWER EVENING POST.

Promises a Detailed Defense
In His Speech of This Week.

Henderson Evening Journal, Aug. 18, 1907.—A short time ago while in Evansville, on important legal business, and while at dinner, I was approached by a representative of the Evansville Courier, who, among other things called my attention to an article which recently appeared in the Saturday Evening Post, on August 3, and to other similar articles usually emanating in the East, portraying in lurid colors a state of anarchy and warfare in Kentucky. These papers have claimed that this deplored state of affairs exists all over the dark tobacco district of which my Congressional district is a part. In describing this horrible condition both the New York Sun and Saturday Evening Post use this language, "Because of it men sit by night with rifles in their hands to guard their crops and barns; because of it, cities have been called to arms to resist threatened attacks and destruction of property; because of it every night in nineteen counties in Kentucky and Tennessee men sleep with bolts drawn, windows barred and weapons within reach. It has created unrest, suspicion and terror; in a word it has driven peace from the land."

In speaking of such effusions as this I said:

"That the many stories of that nature which have been sent over the country were written by the subsidized agents of the American Tobacco company, that that company is controlled by the same clique who own the Standard Oil company, and is in fact a part of the Standard Oil company's holdings." In a word, I now charge that such articles as that contained in the Saturday Evening Post of August 3, and the recent editorial of the New York Sun, and other similar articles in as far as they describe conditions in my district and in my State are gross exaggerations and that the Standard Oil company is the power behind the throne in the American Tobacco Trust, by both of which statements I unequivocally stand.

The statement that the Standard Oil company is one of the heaviest holders in the American Tobacco company, and that the two companies have acted in unison to suppress the farmer and to destroy his means to exist, was made by me not only in a little interview at Evansville, but more than once on the floor of the Federal Congress, and this is the first time that that statement has ever been questioned or challenged.

As to the truth of the statements in these highly pictorial and sensational stories that are being scattered broadcast over the country, especially the article contained in the Saturday Evening Post, of August 3 I have this to say: that in that article there is not one solitary statement that is not absolutely incorrect or grossly exaggerated, and it was about such articles especially that I was interviewed.

This interview affords me no opportunity to go into detail in correcting the statements made in such articles. If those who most severely criticize me will kindly hold their judgment in abeyance for a few days, I shall offer proof of the falsity of all these charges. I believe I can convince the most earnest apologist of the trusts and the most bitter enemy of farmers' organizations and of the tobacco organization in particular, that these statements are either untrue or that the little truth they contain is perverted and exaggerated.

As to the charge so flippantly and so repeatedly made that the night riders are my clients, that I am an apologist for the lawless, and that my speeches are of an incendiary character and dangerous, and that in effect I cry "Don't hang the miscreants from the most convenient tree, don't burn their property, don't ravage their fields," and that this "is the kind of advice which experience teaches is susceptible of a double interpretation," I feel that it is hardly necessary, in the face of five long years in the public eye, to answer not exactly a charge, but an insinuation. An inference utterly unfounded in fact and absolutely unwarranted by any character of interpretation which can be put upon any utterance of mine. It is not necessary at this late day that I should come to my constituents or to the people of the press of this state and declare that always I have stood absolutely, unequivocally and unalterably for the speedy, impartial and rigid enforcement of the law no matter whether it be violated by friend or foe, trust or farmer.

So well was my position upon this question known, and so often had it been expressed, that prior to the so-called night riding, when there was for the first time talk of apprehension of violence, or depredation in the dark tobacco district, that Felix Ewing, chairman of the executive committee, and the moving spirit of the Dark Tobacco Association, telephoned me to come up to his home on the night of Nov. 5, 1905. He was then at Glenraven upon a bed of sickness, to which unfortunately he is still confined. He requested me to go to Springfield in the very heart of the dark tobacco growers' district, and on the following day to address an immense gathering of planters at that place. He said to me above all things, "I wish to prevent any act of lawlessness which may be even remotely attributed to this organization, and I have sent for you because I believe that you will most strongly reprehend any act of that character. The association will have a stenographer who will take your speech and I shall, if possible, put a copy of it into the hands of every member of this association."

In obedience to that call, among other things, I said:

"I am here to speak no word of sympathy or love for the trust, but I will say to the free-born farmers of Robertson county that there is one thing you must respect, and that is the law. I want to say to you that while God's love saved the world, it is his law that moves it. Destroy law and order and turn your backs upon the courts of justice, and no man's property is safe, no woman's honor is sacred. Your safety by night and your independence by day is dependent upon law. I have no patience with mobs. There is but one instance on earth

USING OLD NIGHT DRESSES.

How They Can Be Made Over Into Serviceable Petticoats.

When night dresses become worn about the yokes and sleeves and are ready to be discarded, instead of tearing up the skirt parts for dust cloths and the like, make them into petticoats for the children or for yourself. Usually night dresses are of two or more widths and there always is ample to convert into at least three petticoats for the children or one for a woman. Bands of insertion may be added, and a narrow ruffle around the bottom, with a flounce set on of lace and tucks.

An effective skirt made from a castoff nainsook night dress had a knee flounce made of sheer dotted swiss with two bands of valenciennes lace insertion set in, and a ruffle of the swiss edged with the lace finishing the bottom. The under or dust ruffle also was of the swiss and edged with lace, and the effect was delightfully soft and dainty, in fact, just the thing for wearing under a dainty or lawn dress.

Children's petticoats now are made so full that two such a half widths of material is not too much to use for one. Many of the petticoats this year are made to match the little dresses with which they are intended to be worn, and the five-cent lace fill a long felt want for trimming, as they are dainty, effective, and wear fairly well.

CASE FOR THE SPECTACLES.

Makes Pretty Present for Elderly Member of the Family.

Here is a suggestion for a very useful present to give an elderly lady. It may be made of kid, suede or silk, and is embroidered with silk in long satin and cording stitches. The case may be made the size shown, or a little smaller to fit the glasses they are intended to hold. Cut two pieces of card, one for the back and one for front; cut one piece of silk for front, allowing turnings all round, and one for the back, which must have the turn-over tab cut on for the top; a piece of silk for lining each must also be cut; work the pieces for the front and the tab with the embroidery design as shown; place a thin layer of wadding over the card for front, then stretch the embroidery over it, line with silk and stitch neatly together at edge; put the silk and lining over the card for back in same way, but put an interlining of linen in the back to make it firm; make a strap of silk one-third inch wide and stretch across the front, then sew the back and front together neatly at the edge. Finish all round either with the finest silk cord or very coarse embroidery silk.

BEAD NECKLACE.

Here is a design for a bead necklace, or long "chain" to which the favorite trinket may be attached. Green, white and black beads are very effective in various combinations.

Innovation of Wedding Gowns.
At a recent English wedding the bride's gown was of dotted silk, with a richly embroidered satin train, and the six bridesmaids were garbed in different shades of rose pink and forget-me-not blues, two in each shade, and all carried spray bouquets of white flowers.
At another wedding in St. Margaret's, Westminster, the attendants, in empire gowns of cream-colored velvet over white silk, wore wreaths of pink carnations instead of hats, and carried bouquets to match.

In Light Wear.
The printed silk mulis are beautiful, and the embroidered batistes and swisses defy description.

The all white embroidered swisses are always modish and serviceable and there are many pretty new designs in vogue popular make lines. Embroidered swisses and batistes showing delicate color in the design are many, but none so well appreciated as the pretty swiss with a ground of white striped with closely set black hair lines and is embellished with pale blue embroidered dots of water silk.

Pongee.

Satin-finished pongee plays a part in wedding gowns, as well as in frocks for other occasions, dresses of this material being particularly smart with painted skirts and dainty little capes, with the new wide, round sleeves cut in one with the mantles, which are trimmed with a crisp tuck in fancy silk braid. The frocks are open and show beneath them a soft blouse of white linen, inset with lace trim with gold thread.

CHILDREN AT TABLE

NEVER TOO YOUNG TO BE TAUGHT MANNERS.

With the First Meal Taken with the Elders Attention Should Be Paid to the Little Graces of Good Breeding.

As soon as a baby is old enough to take its first meal at the table with grown people attention should be paid to its manners. Precisely why instinctively we seem always to do the wrong thing and to forget it, I do not know, unless it is on the basis of the perverseness of human nature.

The fact remains, however, that unless a baby is taught differently it will show up food in a most distressing manner and fill its little mouth too full at every bite. Infants seem also to have a positive talent for holding fork or spoon in the wrong way, and all these things, apparently trivial, must be corrected by mothers.

To think that a baby is too young to be taught the amount of food that a fork should hold is the greatest mistake, because the little one will continue in the way it begets.

Each one of us has been appalled or disgusted at the bad table manners of the children of some of our friends, but it is not too much to say that such are entirely the result of indifference or ignorance on the part of parents and reflects upon them accordingly.

Only such quantity as may be comfortably put into the mouth should be taken on the fork a time, and two bites from the same forkful is the height of bad manners, small boys and girls should learn. Attention should be given to the way the implement is held, for the instinctive method seems to be to grasp it at the head of the tines. A child should be taught at once that the clasp must be toward the end of the handle, and thus eating will be a simpler process for little children, especially if the fork is a bit large.

There is no excuse for a little boy or girl taking soup from a spoon as full as it is to dripping while raised. I know some grown people have this habit that one cannot help calling disgusting, however it is plain, but a spoon should never be more than moderately full and the liquid should be taken from the side, not from the tip. The little one should learn to be taught how to drink in a well-mannered way. Instead of the cup being allowed to go into the mouth to the bottom the little one should learn to take small mouthfuls of the liquid, and the lips will be less covered with it when the cup is taken down. "Milk moustaches" are as reprehensible for children as for grown persons.

Being just a healthy little animal by nature, a child regards a napkin in the light of foolishness and will use it only when the use of civility is being inculcated. This, however, is one it should early learn, for remnants of food bit off the spoon and the like are not only unattractive, but are a nuisance, and if a child is a little more positively than in its table manners. If these at the table with it, it is in slavery for the rest of the day, or she, but unfortunately the reverse does not work without aid. A good example alone in the matter of eating is not enough for little children. Prompting and aid is necessary, but it will more quickly acquire attractive ways and be less of a young animal at its food if the teaching is reinforced by example.—Baltimore American.

ONE OF THE NOVELTIES.

Embroidered Jumper Is Popular with Good Dressers.

The embroidered jumper is one of the novelties. It should be made of the same material as the skirt and is to be worn over a sheer shirtwaist. It is a fascinating little garment and will repay the trouble of making. The waist fastens down the back and a hook-plait may be laid in the center to hide the buttons and buttonholes. The top of the plait should be finished with a buttoned scallop to correspond with the border.

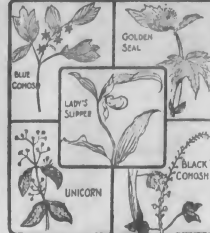

Pad the scallops by running them with darning cotton before working. The leaves should be embroidered in the solid satin stitch, the stems in the outline and the dots and flowers can be done as eyelets. In the solid embroidery if preferred. Use white mercerized cotton No. 25 or 30, according to the quality and weight of the linen.—Montreal Herald.

Smart Traveling Costume.

It is never so difficult to look well dressed as when traveling, whether by land or sea, and the woman who can appear neatly groomed at the end of a long journey deserves the highest praise.

If traveling an extended land trip, across the continent or embarking upon the ocean voyage, which may be anywhere from five days to two weeks, depending upon whether the direct sea and the woman who can appear neatly groomed at the end of a long journey deserves the highest praise.

Dark colors are always best, whether on the car or board a steamer, and such shades as do not readily show the season the separate waist should be the same color as the skirt rather than white. Dark tints are always an excellent shade for traveling, but there are many women to whom even more becoming and this is equally good.

THE BADGE OF HONESTY

The above illustration represents the several natural medicinal plants which enter into Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

It Stands Alone The only medicine for the cure of women's peculiar weaknesses and ailments, the ingredients of which are printed and placed upon every bottle wrapper leaving no room for doubt in Buffalo, N. Y., where it is made, is Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

It Stands Alone Not only in respect to its known composition, but also as the only specific advertised remedy for women's diseases which absolutely contains no alcohol.

It Stands Alone As the one women, the makers of which take care to patients fully into their confidence and tell them exactly what they are taking. This Dr. Pierce can afford to do because his "Favorite Prescription" is made of such ingredients and after working formula that has thousands of cures to its credit—thus placing its merits above all others.

It Stands Alone As nature's cure for the diseases peculiar to women, and it composed of Golden Seal root, Blue Cohosh root, Unicorn root, Black Cohosh root, and other purely natural ingredients, and preserve the medicinal principle residing in the root unimpaired, for any length of time in any climate. It is scientific and practical. It is prepared by chemists and pharmacists at the laboratory of the World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

In the early sixties it was usually the duty of a practicing physician to ride many miles every day on his regular round of visits upon his patients. In those days a young man who had received a careful medical training in one of the best colleges in that day was accustomed to ride ten, twenty and often thirty miles or more, visiting the sick and afflicted. His success was soon phenomenal. Doctors and families called him for consultation to towns at considerable distances by rail. He became a household name in the West, as a curing and distressing disease of women. He had early discovered that by combining the extracts of certain native medicinal plants in just the right proportion, with out the use of alcohol, his "Prescription" almost invariably cured such cases.

Later, in order to place this remedy before the public in a shape easily to be procured, he established a laboratory at Buffalo, N. Y., where regular qualified chemists and pharmacists were put in charge to accurately prepare his "Prescription" and put it in shape for shipment. This remedy, which he named Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription," is a "patent medicine" but is a real prescription of a real physician in a real practice, and hence the name.

Pierce's Pleasant Pellets These tiny, sugar-coated pills are a pleasant and efficacious remedy for all ailments of the stomach, bowels, liver and bladder. Cures Constipation and Bad Digestion. One or two for a chronic case, or four for a catarrh.

Wm. S. Taylor offers to come back to Kentucky and stand trial upon the following conditions:

- 1 No part of the reward fund of $100,000 to be used to prosecute him.
- 2 Six Republicans to be put on the jury.
- 3 Bail to be allowed within the limits of $100,000.
- 4 Indictments against all parties used as prosecuting witness to be dismissed.
- 5 The judge to be selected in advance by mutual agreement.

Legislative acts would be required to comply with several of these conditions. With a jury and a judge of his own selection, no witness allowed to turn state's evidence and an agreement to let him run at large, he would condescend to stand trial. Bail is a bird.

Taft stopped in Oklahoma long enough to advise that the new Democratic constitution be turned down. After all the big Secretary is just a cheap politician who would rather have a republican territory than a Democratic state in a presidential election.

LIGHTNING

Destroyed Barn and 20 Tons of Hay.

During the electric storm of last Saturday lightning struck a barn on the farm of Mr. John Edmunds, of the Clarksville road.

Mr. Green Rickman, who has the farm leased, had just gotten his hay crop into the building. The crop was estimated at 20 tons, which with the barn, was entirely consumed. There was no insurance over the contents. Mr. Edmunds is away from home, but it is generally believed that he had no insurance on the barn. If that be true the loss on barn and contents will be about $1,000.

CLOSE CALL.

Gilmer Bell Barely Escapes A Broken Neck.

Last Sunday Gilmer Bell came near losing his life. He had gone to Mason's Mill with a party of about 20 to remain a week. Sunday while the young men were bathing in a stream, young Bell, about 15 years of age, made a spring from the slippery bank to dive to the bottom. His feet slipped, which caused him to almost turn a summersault. The mud in the bottom of the stream is a foot or more deep. The diver went far enough over to cause him to strike the mud with the back of his head, and he was so doubled up, as our informant says, as to almost break his neck.

The wrench of his neck gave him considerable pain, but he was carried to the camp where his friends attended to him as best they knew how. He came home Sunday afternoon with Allen Nuckolls and other young men who visited the campers Sunday morning. The whole party will come back to the city today.

Young Bell is the only child of Mrs. Flora Bell, of Dallas, Texas. He has been visiting relatives in the city during his vacation.

Several Good Meetings—
Prominent Citizen Dead.

Barnes, Ky., Aug.—Worming and suckering tobacco is the order of the day. Worms are plentiful and they are cutting the weed very badly. The crop looks well.

We have had plenty of rain and corn is looking well. Roasting years have come and everybody is getting fat and saucy.

Mr. E. M. Barnes had a variety for dinner Wednesday, in the way of a peach cobbler. It was enjoyed very much by his family.

Bro. Page, of Russellville, conducted a series of meetings at New Barren Spring Baptist church which resulted in four additions, three by conversion and one by letter. The church was revived very much.

Rev. H. C. Ford, of Nebo, conducted a series of meetings at Ford's Chapel which began August 8. There were ten additions to the church membership. Bro. Ford is a good speaker and the church was very much revived and built up.

Mr. Ben F. Clark, of Cairo, Ill., is on a visit to his old home. He left here for Illinois about thirty years ago when a boy. He is hale and hearty. Mr. Clark is an uncle of Capt. E. W. Clark of Hopkinsville.

Miss Kate Clark has been on the sick list for the past two weeks. Rev. Williams of Nashville, is holding a tent meeting on the Johnson Mill road, one mile from Pleasant Hill Baptist church. Bro. Williams is a young man, about twenty-seven years old.

Warner West died yesterday afternoon, after an illness of several weeks of typhoid fever. He was about fifty years old, a member of New Barren Spring Baptist church and a most excellent citizen, liked by every one who knew him. He is survived by four little children, his wife having died about two months ago.

The September Circle

In The Circle for September, Ernest C. Coulter writes of "The Big Brothers and the Children's Court" with such enthusiasm for the splendid results which those "Big Brothers" are achieving in the lives of the children of the tenements that the article is an inspiration which must leave its mark in the lives of the readers. A very important article in the September number of The Circle is a description of "The First Self-Governed Jewish Community Since the Fall of Jerusalem," from the pen of David Blaustein, D. D., who, as Superintendent of Educational Alliance, is well qualified to tell of this epoch in the history of the Jewish nation. . . . Viscount S. Aoki, the first Japanese Ambassador, sends through the columns of The Circle "A Peace Message to the American People," a message of kindness, yet conveyed with dignity.

There are others which involve no bloodshed. "Thomas R. Ybarra, in relating 'The Battle of the Sultan Sea,' tells of one waged between man and nature, while Ernest Harold Baynes, in an article which covers two splendidly illustrated pages of The Circle, describes 'Hunting with a Camera.'

It is right and entirely proper that the people, especially of the dark tobacco district, should feel deep and just indignation toward the American Tobacco Company. But I am above all things anxious that the public sentiment result in wrong to no man nor in any outrage or violence to person or to property, but in a strict and rigid enforcement of the law; and I believe that if the law is rigidly and mercilessly enforced, and the people see in it a protecting Aegis, that they will look to the enforcement of its decrees as a means to drive and murder, for justice and protection. This may be drawn from it I shall not be drawn by any criticism however severe, or any calumny however cruel.

CHAPTER XXXV.

The Curtain Falls.

Bronzed by months of scouting on those northern plains, a graver, older look upon his face, and the bars of a captain gracing the shoulders of his new cavalry jacket, Donald Brant trotted down the stage road bordering the Bear Water, his heart alternating between hope and dread.

The familiar yellow house at the cross-roads appeared so unattractive as to suggest the thought that Naida must have been impressively lonely during those months of waiting. He knocked at the sun-warmed door. Without delay it was flung open, and a vision of flushed face and snowy drapery confronted him.

"Why, Lieut. Brant! I was never more surprised in my life. Do, pray, come right in. Yes, Naida is here, and I will have her sent for at once. Oh, Howard, this is Lieut. Brant, just back from his awful Indian fighting. How very nice that he should happen to arrive just at this time, isn't it?" The young officer politely accepted Mr. Wynekop's extended hand, and found a convenient chair, as Miss Spencer hastened from the room to announce his arrival.

"Why just at this time?" he questioned.

Mr. Wynekop cleared his throat. "Why—why, you see, we are to be married this evening—Miss Spencer and myself. We shall be so delighted to have you witness the ceremony. It is to take place at the church, and my people insist upon making quite an affair out of the occasion—'Phoebe is so popular, you know.'"

The lady again bustled in, her eyes twinkling with enthusiasm. "Why, I think it is perfectly delightful. Don't you, Howard? Now Lieut. Brant and Naida can stand up with us. You will, won't you, Lieutenant?"

"That must be left entirely with Naida for decision," he replied, soberly. There was a rustle at the inner door, and Naida stood there. Her eyes met, and the color mounted swiftly to the girl's cheeks. Then he stepped resolutely forward, forgetful of all other presence, and clasped her hand in both his own. Neither spoke a word, yet each understood something of what was in the heart of the other.

"Will you walk outside with me?" he asked, at last. "I have much to say which I am sure you would rather hear alone."

She bent her head, and with a brief word of explanation to the others, the young officer conducted her forth into the bright July sunshine. They walked in silence side by side along the bank of the little stream. Brant glanced furtively toward the sweet, girlish face. Then he spoke.

"Naida," he said, gravely, "I have come back as I said I would. Surely I read welcome in your eyes?"

"Yes."

"And I have come to say that there is no longer any shadow of the dead between us."

She looked up quickly, her hands clasped, her cheeks flushing. "Are you sure?"

"Perhaps you misunderstand; perhaps you mistake my meaning."

"I know it all," he answered, soberly. "From the lips of Hampton."

"You have seen him?" Oh, Lieut. Brant, please tell me the whole truth. I have missed him so much, and since the day he rode away to Cheyenne not one word to explain his absence has come back to me. You cannot understand what this means, how much he has become to me through years of loneliness."

"You have heard nothing?"

"Not a word."

Brant drew a long, deep breath. He had supposed she knew this. At last he said gravely: "Naida, the truth will prove the kindest message. I think. He died in that unbroken ring of defenders clustered about Gen. Custer on the bluffs of the Little Big Horn."

Her slight figure trembled so violently that he held her close within his arms.

"There was a smile upon his face when we found him. He performed his full duty. Naida, and died as became a soldier and a gentleman."

"But—this, this cannot be! I saw him published list; his name was not among them."

"The man who fell was Robert Nolan."

Gently he drew her down to a seat upon the soft turf of the bank. She looked up at him helplessly, her mind seemingly dazed, her eyes yet filled with doubt.

"Robert Nolan? My father?"

He bent over toward her, pressing his lips to her hair and stroking it tenderly with his hand.

"Yes, Naida, darling; it was truly Robert Hampton Nolan who died in battle, in the ranks of his old regiment—died as he would have chosen to die, thank God! completely cleared of every stain upon his honor. Sit right here, and listen while I tell you."

There is in the story no word which does not reflect nobility upon the soldier's daughter."

She uplifted her white face. "Tell me," she said, "all you know."

In the hospital at Bethune, slowly recovering. His sworn deposition has been forwarded to the department at Washington, and will undoubtedly result in the honorable replacing of your father's name on the army list. I will tell you briefly the man's confession, together with the few additional facts necessary to make it clear.

"Your father and mine were for many years friends and army comrades. They saw service together during the great war, and afterward upon the plains in Indian campaigning. Unfortunately a slight misunderstanding arose between them. One night they openly quarreled when heated by wine, and exchanged blows. The following evening your father's chance to be officer of the guard and duty, my father, whose wife had then been dead a year, was thoughtless enough to accompany Mrs. Nolan home at a late hour from a post ball. It was merely an act of ordinary courtesy, but gossip magnified the tale.

She bent her head, and with a brief word of explanation to the others, the young officer conducted her forth into the bright July sunshine. They walked in silence side by side along the bank of the little stream. Brant glanced furtively toward the sweet, girlish face. Then he spoke.

CAR SHORTAGE PREDICTED.

Railroad Commissioner C. C. McChord's Letter of Advice.

Frankfort, Ky., June 24, 1907
TERRY COAL & COKE CO.,
Hopkinsville, Ky.

Replying to your favor of the 14th instant, I unhesitatingly advise all consumers of coal to lay in a supply during the summer months and thereby avoid the inconvenience which must result on account of a shortage of cars next winter which in my opinion will be much more acute than was the shortage of last winter, unless the consumers lay in their coal supply as suggested.

You are at liberty to publish this in the interest of the producers and consumers of Coal.

Yours Very Truly,
C. C. McCHORD, Chairman,
R. R. Commission State of Ky.

The railroad and coal operating officials of Western Kentucky have given out the same official notice, and urge to advise our stockholders, and customers to lay in their coal this summer.

Last winter's experience and high prices, together with the above timely information should be sufficient warning, and we trust our people will take advantage of it and act at once.
